Positive Protection for your Pets with Elanco and Fear Free

1

Newborn puppies and kittens are initially protected by antibodies passed down from their mothers, but this protection gradually decreases over time. To maintain their immunity, young animals require a series of vaccinations.

2

Our pets are vulnerable to diseases in their environment and from contact with other animals. Vaccinations are crucial in safeguarding them against such illnesses.

3

Some illnesses are Zoonotic which means they can be passed from pets to humans. Protecting our pets with vaccines also helps to protect our human family members!

4

Minimize injection site discomfort with highly purified, low volume vaccines or combination vaccines.

5

Talk to your veterinarian about your pet's specific vaccination needs!
